From:	rbc1214@bresnan.net
To:	Bob Giordano
Cc:	Brian Hensel; John Wilson; Kevin Slovarp; Emily Jensen; Grp. City Council and City Web Site; Jim Sayer; Ben Weiss; Dale Clark; Neighborhood Committee - Rattlesnake Transportation; Bob Wachtel
Subject:	Re: bottom of Greenough hill hazard, again, fix needed asap
Date:	Friday, March 23, 2018 9:33:04 AM

Re the Greenough Underpass problem. Just filling potholes doesn't really solve the problem. The puddle is often so deep that it forces south bound traffic out into the northbound lane., I keep hearing that the whole area needs rebuilding to solve the problem, but why not just trench across the road and east sidewalk and lay a drainage pipe that would empty into Rattlesnake Creek? Not that hard. Of course there's the issue of untreated run-off going into the creek, but it's basically rain water. Maybe there's even the possibility of putting a filter in the piping system. I'm not an engineer, and I apologize if I'm unaware of some complications; but I would urge those in charge of decisions on this problem to think a little out of the box and go for something more comprehensive than just filling and refilling potholes. Thanks for considering. Robin Carey