Hi, Jeremy.

I still haven't seen the new lights. The photos make it look like the difference between a candle and a daylight!

For what it's worth, my interest started when I read a post by Matt Ryan at the 100 block of Agnes on Nextdoor.com.

Thanks.

They have two demonstration areas installed now that will allow us to "ground-truth" the results. Attached are some before/after images. These show the dramatic improvement in light quality. We still need to verify that the lighting levels meet our standards to make sure we strike the right balance. We'll have more info soon that we can formally release to the public.
